Biography

Portland native David Sicotte has been in charge of the visual design on a number of independent films, as well as major music videos featuring such bands as Dandy Warhol's and Camaro Hair. Widely regarded as one of the leading commercial designers on the West Coast, he has been responsible for the visual design on national campaigns Nike, Adidas, Mercedes, Ford, EA Sports and Budweiser, among others.

Sicotte's body of work also includes such award-winning short films as "Slingshot" – a third-place winner in the narrative category at the 2000 Big Muddy Film Festival and trophy winner at the Rochester International Film Festival the same year – and "Crank Calls" – recipient of the Audience Choice Award for Best Short at the 2002 Birmingham Sidewalk Moving Picture Festival.

Sicotte has also shot and designed documentaries, including "John Strasberg, Accidentally on Purpose" – the recipient of such awards as Best Educational Documentary from the New York Independent International Film Festival.
